

Home // Command/HQ // Technology // Security & Surveillance // North Texas School Getting a Police Station

North Texas School Getting a Police Station

Since the Florida shooting, threats have been made, and in some cases, students have been arrested, in North Texas cities and towns including Arlington, Trophy Club and Krum.

BY BY STEPHEN ENGLISH — FEBRUARY 22, 2018

SOURCE: FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM

WESTLAKE, Texas — From the timing, it might seem like the plan to create a police substation on the campus of Westlake Academy is a response to the Feb. 14 shooting at a high school in Florida.

Actually, the plan — a joint project of the city council of the small town north of Keller and the school's board of trustees which began last fall — was passed one week before the Florida shooting.

"There was no one particular incident that prompted this plan. The atrocities that occurred at Sandy Hook, and Columbine before that, confirm that horrific things can happen anywhere," said Laura Wheat, who is both the president of the Westlake Academy school board and mayor of Westlake.

Since the Florida shooting, threats have been made, and in some cases, students have been arrested, in North Texas cities and towns including Arlington, Trophy Club and Krum.

On Tuesday, Arlington Bowie High School tweeted that a student brought a BB gun to school.

Keller Police Chief Michael Wilson, who said his city has provided law enforcement service to Westlake since 2002, said the plan was inspired by "what we've seen throughout our country" along with the findings of security audits done for the unique campus.

"Westlake Academy is a very nontraditional campus. It's not built like a typical school, it's more like a corporate campus," Wilson said.

"We knew if we were going to try to close any potential security gaps, we couldn't do that with a traditional approach."

Keller police officers will operate from the campus location. Wilson said staffing will vary, but that his force supplies two patrol officers and two traffic officers to the town now.

Wheat said that while Keller police response times are "already impressive" in Westlake, the substation could improve on them.

“No longer will they need to run back to a station in Keller to complete a report or take care of other administrative duties,” she said.

Wilson said that rather than constructing a new building, existing space will be re-purposed to accommodate the police station. Westlake communications manager Jon Sasser said that will cost the town about $25,000.

work on the substation is set to begin this month and is expected to be complete by the end of spring, according to a Town of Westlake news release.

©2018 Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Visit the Fort Worth Star-Telegram at www.star-telegram.com

Distributed by Tribune Content Agency, LLC.

Join the conversation!

This site requires you to login or register to post a comment.

No comments have been added yet. Want to start the conversation?

You May Like

Sponsored Links by Taboola

Roanoke, Texas: This Young, Genius Company Is Disrupting a $200 Billion Industry

EverQuote Insurance Quotes

Shoppers Are Getting Unbelievable Deals With This Little-Known Site

Tophatter

Check Out The Classy Senior Living Facilities Near Roanoke

Senior Living | Sponsored Links

Bluetooth hearing aids will change your life

hear.com

